BIRD-MASONS.

How They Build a Solid Prison Wall Entombing Their Captives Arive. St. Louis Globe Democrat.

While out hunting a few days ago, says a Fort McDowell (Ariz.) correspondent, I found a peculiar stone, nearly round, about four inches long by three and a half inches in diameter. I picked it up, and, as I did so, it rattled as if it was hollow and had something inside. It was very hard and of a dark-blue color. Wishing to see what was inside to scale. Wishing to see what was inside to make it rattle, I broke it on another stone, when, to my astonishment, I found the skeleton of a frog. How it got inside of a stone almost as hard as flint remained a mystery until yesterday. While out looking after my stock I noticed some birds that looked like swallows, but larger, carrying mud to a cliff and depositing it in holes that they had dug in the side Loans Negotiated,

It is notes that they had dug in the side of the cliff. I went to the top of the cliff and climbed down to one of the holes, expecting to find the nest of the peculiar bird, but instead I found a globular stone like the one in which I found the frog's skeleton. I broke it, and in this one I found a livard almost decompt the side of the global state of the peculiar bird, but instead I found a globular stone like the one in which I found the frog's skeleton. I broke it, and in this one I found a lizard almost decayed.

I broke several others and found bugs and small animals, some not yet dead. I watched the birds at their work and learned how they put their victims in the stone. They nearly complete the ball, leaving only a small hole in one end; then they get an animal—bugs, or sometimes a small bird—and put it in the ball; and one stays and keeps the victim in while the others get mud and close the tomb, with the victim alive.

There are thousands of holes in the bank, and each one is the tomb of some animal. Why they put the animals in the balls is a mystery; for, after the mud dries, it is so hard that it requires con-siderable force to break them. This is a subject for scientific men to ponder over.

Phenix Herald. And old, grey-haired-looking man, who was en route to California, was standing on the depot platform the other day, when an enthusiastic Albuquerquean engaged him in conversation, setting forth in glowing colors the agricultural and climatic advantages of New Mexico.

The grey haired stranger listened attentively, but finally said:
"My friend, you may be telling the truth, but if you have all these advantages, why don't you advertise them? Why out in Kansas, as our train came through it was boarded at every town by real estate men and citizens with circu hars, setting forth the advantages of the town, and predicting for it a great and glorious future. We are going to California because we have been impressed with what we have read of it in publi cations of all kinds, magazine articles, special editions of California papers, pamphlets and folders. Most of us had scarcely heard of New Mexico, except as a wild land, overrun by hostile Indians. Now, sir; if you have as good a country

A member of one of the oldest Kansas City commission firms, in an interview recently, gave expression to the following "We regard this as one of the low years We have seen markets about as low three different times in the last twenty-odd years—namely; in 1866, 1874, 1880 and this year. Every seven years prices are extremely low or excessively high, and between times they advance or declineall of which grow out of the law of sup-ply and demand. When prices are ad-vancing stock and breeding cattle are held off the markets and all breeders and Louisiana State Lottery Company. raisers save their young stock. During this time prices get high. At the end of three or four years all have a surplus of cattle to market, then the decline sets in and it takes about three years to dispose of this surplus. We are now at the end of the last three years' decline and we think a reaction will set in next year for stronger prices on all grades of cattle, with an upward tendency for two or three years afterwards. We base these opinions on our experience of twenty-four years in the cattle business in the

Nothing pays better than a small space given to the raising of carrots, in the opinion of a correspondent of the Rural New-Yorker. Fed to horses through the winter they give the very best of results. They are better for horses than any other kind of roots. Few people seem to know how much horses will enjoy a hit of some green feed described. will enjoy a bite of some green food during the winter. Those who do know it have discovered one of the great secrets of keeping a horse in health. Give a horse a daily ration of chopped carrots during the winter and grain will be saved and the horse will feel brighter. Most farmers seem to think that the carrot farmers seem to think that the carrot cannot be raised except by hand culture, and consequently it will not pay to medfort standard to the Company in New Orleans, or York Exchange in enfonry letter. Man's Insignificance.

Somehow, when a man's mind becomes really engaged—say like that of Baron Humboldt—and he is able to place in focus more and more of the cosmos of which he forms a part, the things he at the outset of his life regards as the larg-est get smaller and smaller, till at last that first immense and overwhelming important thing, himself, becomes so insig nificant that it is only through a process of mental microscopy he can discern his little float swim or swiggle across the field of view. How bigis a man, anyway? Well, he is smaller than an elephant, and an elephant is smaller than a mountain, and a mountain is smaller than the world, and the world is a mustard seed compared with the sun, and the sun it-self is a mere mote in the dust-cloud of spheres that stretches out through the universe beyond the reach of thought.

James Leslie, a farmer of Ada, Ohio about six months ago noticed a small sore coming on his cheek. It grew more serious in spite of treatment, and in a few weeks assumed a malignant form Forfeiture Notice.

Notice is hereby given to Peter Forbach or those claiming under him, that I have done the assessment work on the Black Eagle and Bichard III mining claims, situated near Riveride Station, Pinal County, Arizonr, for the years 1885 and 1886, and that unless you pay your portion of said assessment work on said claims, amounting to 8200, within 90 days after the publication of this notice, your portion of said mining claims will be forfeited to the undersigned according to law.

Florence, July 23, 1887.

Idea weeks assumed a malignant form and began eating away the bones of his nose. Local physicians pronounced it glanders, and said he had caught the disease from a horse; that the disease was fatal and very contagious. The effect of this was to completely ostracize Leslie, even his own kinsfolk deserting him. No leper in olden times was ever more completely cast out. So fearful of contagion are the neighbors that Leslie cannot dispose of his home, although willing to dispose of it at half price.
